THOUSANDS RALLY AROUND TRAYVON MARTIN CASE IN CALL FOR FAIRER SYSTEM

Chicago Tribune

Thousands of people filled a Loop plaza Saturday and called for a fairer justice system in the wake of George Zimmerman's acquittal in the fatal shooting of unarmed African-American teenager Trayvon Martin in Florida.

The protesters, mostly African-Americans, gathered outside the Dirksen U.S. Courthouse at Adams and Dearborn streets in one of several rallies across the country.

"We are here today because our children now face diminished justice," the Rev. Jesse Jackson told a crowd estimated by police to be about 6,000. "We must boycott Florida and stop 'stand your ground' [laws]."

Many of the protesters held signs with images of Martin and messages such as "LGBTs Against Racism," "Justice for Trayvon" and "#Chi4Trayvon."

Speakers said they hoped the protesters would work to improve the lives of African-Americans in Chicago.

"I pray we will continue to be bold, that we stand our ground against the proliferation of guns, stand our ground against injustice," said the Rev. Michael Pfleger, of St. Sabina Catholic Church in Gresham.

Liz Walker, 55, held a sign that read: "I am not Trayvon Martin. I am a 55-year-old white female who opposes stand your ground. My gender makes me unthreatening and my race makes me invincible."

"I am hoping that 'stand your ground' laws in the states that have them get repealed," the Park Ridge resident said. "I believe we are making progress, but this case has brought to light how much farther we have to go."

Many attendees said the rally and the verdict sparked personal memories and feelings about the way they have seen racism and the justice system affect their lives.

"I thought about what it would mean, if I were in his shoes and how the verdict might have been the same," said Quinn Rallins, 27, a law school student living on Chicago's South Side. "What happened to Trayvon happens to too many people in our community."

Rosaline Wilson, 62, said she came to the rally remembering her 14-year old brother, who was killed by a police officer more than four decades ago while he was riding home from school, she said.

She said she is hopeful that the justice system will improve and gun violence will end.

"I'm out here for justice for Trayvon ... for all the kids that have been killed," she said. "We need solutions. We need something concrete. We need change."

Obama weighs in

President Obama declared Friday that Trayvon Martin "could have been me, 35 years ago" and urged Americans to understand the pain blacks felt over the case. Obama recalled his encounters with racism and racial profiling. "There are very few African-American men in this country who haven't had the experience of being followed when they were shopping in a department store," he said. "That includes me." REUTERS

The thing about traveling to Ecuador is that before you leave, basically everyone you know-parents, friends, lovers, frienemies-will say something to you along the lines of, "Be careful."

But it's not the usual "be careful." It's more like my friend Erik put it to me:

"You should learn how to say, 'No ransom. Family very poor. Blue eyes are contacts meant to fool stupid American women. No ransom."

I'm happy to report I've been in the capital, Quito, for a week now, and so far I've not gotten kidnapped, robbed, malaria or even traveler's diarrhea. At some 9,000 feet above sea level in the world's highest capital, I can barely walk up a flight of stairs without needing to lie down. My traveling partner, Trin, got totally stuffed by some trolley doors so that, as I looked back, all I could see was his arm flapping in the breeze as the trolley car made off in the direction of the southern Quito ghetto, but if that's the worst that happens to us, we can consider ourselves lucky.

(Note: That will not be the worst that happens to us. I haven't even had a good boozing night yet. When I do, some enterprising taxi driver surely will deliver me to the Colombian border. Also, if someone hands me a foul-tasting brew that makes me see snakes crawling out of my arms, I'll surely chug it down.)

(Note on that note: Though that was a joke, I could hear the popcorn crackle of my mother's knuckles seizing up from half a

By the time you read this, Trin and I will have rented a car and embarked upon a tour of the country with nothing but a GPS and our useless Spanglish gibberish. Already my four years of Spanish classes have proven more frustrating than useful. I can identify roughly every fourth word spoken, generally follow the outlines of a conversation and then contribute nothing useful whatsoever except for the occasional "si."

While waiting to meet my friend Alberto my first day, I wandered Quito, got hungry and ordered some sopo de pollo from the least grimy-looking street vendor, figuring chicken soup was a) safe enough and b) the only food item for which I could recall the

The nice young lady then said about 50 things to me, and because I didn't know what she was saying, I just replied "si" to everything. Then I got a bowl of chicken soup full of every weird vegetable grown in Ecuador and one hard-boiled egg. I pictured her saying to the cook, "So this guy wants everything in his soup." And the cook saying, "Even the gonads of that last American tourist?"

"Si."

Of course I kid. Quito is a fascinating city funneling vogurt-like between two lush mountain ranges. I've already made new friends and been reminded why I loved the old ones so much. I can't wait to get out into the distant jungles, beaches and mountains of Ecuador.

And just in case, let me inform my loved ones: I'll totally use my butt to smuggle you back some snake brew.

CPS CUTS RUN DEEP

CONCERNS ARISE OVER QUALITY OF EDUCATION

Chicago Tribune

The fallout from the Chicago Public Schools' decision to lay off almost 3,000 teachers and school-based staff will be felt citywide when classes resume next month.

Schools will be forced to increase class sizes, eliminate field trips, slash art and music programs and cancel intervention initiatives for struggling students, said principals and parents group leaders Friday, when more than 1,000 teachers were let go.

"You can't lose programs at this rate, staff at this rate and maintain a quality curriculum at your school despite what CPS says," said Clarice Berry, president of the Chicago Principals and Administrators Association.

'Any frills, any extra programs that would have once brought kids to school, those are all going to be gone because principals have no way to pull a rabbit out of a hat."

The layoffs Friday bring the total for the year to nearly 1,500 teachers. The layoffs are among the highest in CPS history-in 2010, about 1,200 teachers lost their jobs amid that year's fiscal crisis. Before this year's layoffs and school closings, there were about 23,000 teachers working in a district of 681 schools.

CPS blames a deficit of nearly S1 billion and the failure of pension reform for the need to cut staff. Declining enrollment that led the district to close 49 elementary schools and a high school program resulted in 420 teacher cuts earlier this year.

Among the teachers getting the bad news Friday-many in the form of scripted calls from principals -was Ruth Augspurger, an art teacher at Carson Elementary on the South Side and a 10-year CPS veteran. Holding back tears as she spoke at a Chicago Teachers Union news conference, she said she based her career here even though she knew "there were many challenges to teaching in this dis-

CPS spokeswoman Becky Carroll said that unless pension reform can be achieved before school starts Aug. 26, most of the cuts will remain in place. The district said the history of layoffs shows that about 60 percent of teachers often are rehired within the system. But union officials said that's unlikely this year because so many actual positions have been lost.

M-RAHM SAYS ...

Mayor Emanuel on Sunday publicly pointed a finger at the state's pension crisis in two recent doses of bad financial news: 2,000 CPS layoffs and a decline in the city's bond rating. "This is avoidable in a sense," Emanuel said in response to a question about the CPS layoffs. "We need Springfield to step up."

Rather than re-lease 40,000 frustrated fans into the neighborhood, we made the decision to go for it."

Woman dies after fall from coaster

DALLAS The woman who died Friday while riding a 14-story roller coaster at the Six Flags Over Texas amusement park outside Dallas fell from the train car she was riding in, local police who are investigating the incident said Sunday.

Police in Arlington, Texas, about 20 miles west of Dallas. said there was no evidence that the death of the woman, who has not been identified, resulted from criminal intent.

"At this point of the investigation, it does not appear that there was any foul play or criminality associated with this tragic incident," Arlington police said in a state-

At the time that it opened in 1990, the Texas Giant ride was promoted as the tallest wooden roller coaster in the world.

The wooden tracks were replaced in 2010 with steel but the original wooden support structure was kept, according to the Six Flags Entertainment Corp website.

Six Flags spokeswoman Sharon Parker said the company was investigating the incident.

*We are committed to determining the cause of this tragic accident and will utilize every resource throughout this process," Parker said.

All those drafts you feel are the Cubs and Sox talking trades

RedEye

Just nine days until the Major League Baseball trade deadline arrives, and the Cubs and White Sox have been surprisingly quiet.

With both teams way, WAY off the pace in their respective divisions, there isn't a whole lot keeping them from parting with aging commodities. We gauge the strength of the trade winds engulfing some of the more attractive pieces in Chicago.

Cubs, city still trading punches

Chicago Tribune

After years of fits and starts, the Ricketts family's push to remake Wrigley Field and the surrounding area is expected to be added to the win column this week, though the local alderman still is trying to tweak the plan.

Mayor Emanuel, who remains undefeated on his City Council initiatives after more than two years in office, is pushing for approval by the Zoning Committee on Tuesday and the full council Wednesday, before aldermen take their August recess.

The $500 million, five-year plan would renovate the ballpark, put up a hotel and build an office-retail complex and plaza. Baseball fans would see a host of new signage at Wrigley, including a 5,700-square-foot video board in left field.

As the project has moved through the approval process, gaining the endorsements of the Landmarks Commission and Plan Commission, the position of Wrigleyville's alderman, Tom Tunney (44th) has been a wild

In talks with Cubs Chairman Tom Ricketts and Emanuel, the alderman has persuaded the Cubs to reduce the number of outfield signs, not place advertisement at the peak of the hotel, hire additional security and increase remote parking.

But on Wednesday, Tunney said he could not support the project unless the Cubs eliminated a walkway over Clark Street, reduced the hotel's impact on residential Patterson Avenue and accepted a 10-year ban on further signs in the outfield.

On Thursday after the Cubs agreed to work on the Patterson concerns, Tunney told the Plan Commission he had "no objections" to the plan, though he would continue to seek some adjustments.

Later Thursday, however, Tunney sent an email to his 49 colleagues that read, "There are still unresolved issues that we need to address before the package receives my support at the Zoning Committee on Tuesday."

Some aldermen said Friday they were confused by the turn of events but were willing to go to bat for Tunney if asked.

Though the Wrigley rehab is seen by many as a citywide issue, some aldermen said they did not want to set a precedent of allowing the mayor to overrule the local aldermen on zoning matters.

Asked if he would urge colleagues to join him in opposition if his final demands weren't met, Tunney said, "I'm not going to project." He added, "Obviously, we don't want a big brouhaha on the [council] floor."

Freddy Shoop approves.	That Canada is still not very good at basketball.	Nobody cares about hoops in the summer.
4	Why have the Cubs and Sox made so few trades this season?	Is baseball still going on?	They've got Wal-Mart talent at Macy's prices.	So few? But Twitter told me Matt Garza was traded 100 times!	They've been too busy moshing at Pitchfork.	The Blackhawks used up the city's allocated number.
5	Now that Mike Tyson is a fight promoter	earmuff sales went waaaay up.	he can put all those lessons he learned from Don King to use Let the fleering begins	I'm all ears.	he's bound to ruffle some feathers. Wait, did I really just say that?	Don King won't look so bad.

Choose your Bears wear wisely

Bears training camp starts this week. and that means it's time for fans to re-evaluate their game-day jerseys. You can't go wrong with a retired player like Brian Urlacher, whose jersey still is 10th on nflshop.com. But if you're looking for a current Bear, here are our tips based on the

Brian Urlacher Jersey Reliability Scale. JACK M SILVERSTEIN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

LANCE BRIGGS

With 10 seasons of excellence apiece, Charles Tillman and Lance Briggs have similar jersey reliability. Tillman gets the bump for two reasons. First, he's going to go down as the best cornerback in Bears history. Second, Briggs has been among the most popular Bears since 2005, so his jersey is in wider circulation than Tillman's. If you're looking to stand out, Tillman's the

SOLID CHOICES

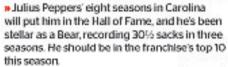

PATRICK MANNELLY MATT FORTE

- Devin Hester's jersey will have greater cache after his retirement. You're not buying the jersey of a fourth-string receiver; you're buying the jersey of a Hall of Fame kick returner.
- » Until recently, Patrick Mannelly was "just the long snapper." Now? He's the franchise's alltime leader in games played.
- By the end of this season, Matt Forte likely will trail only Walter Payton in rushing yards in the Bears record book
- Jay Cutter's Jersey likely will improve with age. as his personality flaws are forgotten and all that remains are his numbers, including (probably) the most passing yards in team history.

A FEW GOOD YEARS

JULIUS PEPPERS

BRANDON MARSHALL

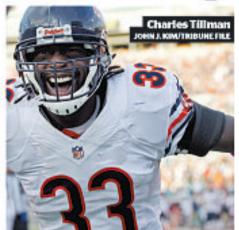

You know the phrase "he rewrote the record books"? Well, Brandon Marshall can have a worse year than his record-breaking 2012 and still end up in the franchise's top 20 in receptions, yards and touchdowns after only two seasons.

SHAKY GROUND

HENRY MELTON •••••• TIM JENNINGS MARTELLUS BENNETT COREY WOOTTON ***

- If Henry Melton has another year like 2012. the lure of a dynamic player plus an unusual jersey (No. 69) will be too great to resist.
- Tim Jennings just completed his best season as a pro and has gotten better as his career has
- »Once Bears fans get a look at The Black Unicorn on and off the field, Martellus Bennett's jersey is bound to sell.

Corey Wootton won Israel Idonije's starting spot in 2012 and could be headed for a Meltonlike breakout season.

STAY AWAY

KYLE LONG 000000000

Bears fans want the best for young Kyle Long. But this team's first-round draft picks don't make reliable jerseys. Cases in point: Marc Colombo. Gabe Carimi, David Terrell and Cedric Benson.

Not this time. Bieb

The Boston Bruins learned from the Blackhawks' mistake. After Justin Bieber (right) walked all over the Hawks' logo in the locker room af the United Center, the staff at TD Garden roped off the Bruins' logo when the Bieb played in Boston this weekend. They also probably kept all mop buckets out of sight.

He's barking mad

Florida linebacker Antonio Morrison has been arrested for the second time in five weeks, this time for allegedly barking at a police dog and resisting arrest. Morrison's defense was the dog barked first, according to a police report. We think we speak for all reasonable people when we say: Um, what?

Could not be more proud to be your champion. To play probably the best round of my career is probably the most fulfilling moment of my career because it is something I thought I would never do here."

-Phil Mickelson, after winning the British Open on Sunday. Tiger Woods finished tied for sixth.

THE DIGIT

Bulls coach Tom Thibodeau (left) told reporters he expects Derrick Rose to play the usual eight-minute shifts with the rest of the starters once the preseason begins. And those will be the best eight minutes Bulls fans have seen in a long time.

THE FINISH LINE

Can we shake on it?

Yusef Williams

I'd like to comment on this whole phenomenon Of people grabbing me, wrapping me up inside their arm

Not meant to do me harm, but meant to say hello

Why can't they grab my hand, shake it once and let me go?

These would be the opening lines to my hit single "Bring Back the Handshake"

... if I were a rapper in a position to create hit singles. Since I am not a rapper, they are the opening lines to this column with the same message: Bring back the handshake.

When it comes to greeting people, the options are hug or handshake. There are a few exceptions—like with fraternities ... or gangs—but for the most part, one of the two will do. If there is a certain amount of love between us, then give me a hug. I'm OK with that. If there isn't enough love to warrant a hug, then just shake my hand. That's cool too. Both gestures tell me the same thing: "It's good to see you, friend."

Not everyone thinks this way. There are those who partake in myriad greetings that exist in that gray area between hug and handshake.

There's the fist pound, which I rarely ever see coming, causing me to be the guy with the open hand looking like I just threw paper against an opponent's rock.

There's the hand-grab that then rotates into another position, which confuses me because I never know if there is a third position, so I release early only to discover there is a third position and now I'm the jerk who let go early.

There's the raised cup hand, which automatically means I'm going to be pulled into a half-chest, half-shoulder bump. This I dread because I'm never sure which way my head should turn and—being of average height—I have face-planted into necks, chests, shoulder blades and plenty of stinky cologne. A few times, I've been pulled into the embrace only to meet with a raised forearm. Apparently this person likes me enough to initiate an embrace but not enough to let me get too close. Unbeknownst to them, I would have been OK with a handshake.

I even have a friend who likes to wrap his left arm around me and palm the back of my head. I rarely look forward to seeing him.

The worst might be when the other person insists on the one-arm bear hug despite the fact that there is a table or barricade between us. Now the greeting includes embracing furniture. It's all a little too much. Why can't we just shake hands?

I understand the power of touch and its many uses in communication. I know the people engaging in these gray-area, nonverbal greetings are only trying to express their affection, and I appreciate it. However, I don't know what's going on half the time and it confuses the heck out me. Saying "hi" should not be confusing. I don't want to memorize a huge number of greetings and be all cerebral every time I see someone I know coming my Friends, let's abandon the gray area and just shake hands. If the handshake is good enough for closing business deals and meeting fathers, it should be good enough for saying hello.

If you're really feeling the love, then give me hug. At least that way when I see two open arms coming my way, I know what I'm in for. YUSEF WILLIAMS IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

There goes your popcorn budget

TheWrap

Moviegoers' wallets got slammed during the second quarter of 2013 as a steady stream of 3-D and IMAX releases drove ticket prices to record levels.

The average movie ticket price hit a new high of $8.38 for the three months ending in June, according to data from the National Association of Theatre Owners. That figure eclipsed the previous record of $8.12, which occurred during the second quarter of 2012.

It also represented a 5.5 percent increase from $7.94 in the first three months of the year.

The culprit for the price hike was an influx of blockbuster releases such as "Star Trek Into Darkness," "Monsters University" and "Iron Man 3," all of which hit theaters in 3-D. The format carries with it a steep surcharge.

Audiences embraced the rose-tinted glasses despite the cost. Movies that were released in 3-D accumulated $1.29 billion in the second quarter of 2013, which represents a 73 percent increase from the $745 million that films released in that format made during the same period the previous year, a spokesman for the National Association of Theatre Owners said.

For the first six months of 2013, the average ticket price evens out to $8.16, which is higher than any previous mark.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD I READ MORE AT LIPSTICK MYSTIC.COM

Cancer Ame 22-July 22 You could have a major revelation. Finally, you'll realize what you really want most is to be celibate. Too bad you're married with three kids and another on one the way. You could end up feeling like you're stranded in the wrong reality.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22 You're in a cranky mood. You'll complain to your honey that he doesn't spend enough money on you. Or you'll tell your girlfriend that you hate her sister, her parents or the smelly bulldog she brought into your relationship.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 You'll feel less annoyed about love. Someone in your immediate circle might express interest in you, much to your surprise. Who knew that your hunky mail man or juicy bus driver had the hots for you?

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Don't do anything too extreme. You may be inspired to do something crazy and destructive. You could end up proposing something steamy to your boss. Don't let it get you fired. And try not to hook up with a stranger just because you're bored.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 You feel the need for instant results. If you just started dating someone, you're already planning the wedding and picking out your future kids' names. News flash: This is likely to freak out your significant other.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Don't be shy. You're fabulous, and it's time to let other people know about it. Put on your hottest dress or tightest pants and march around in a place where you'll be noticed. You could meet somebody luscious.

Capricorn Dec. 22 Jan 19 It's too soon to make any big decisions about romance. Things might work out with that certain someone, or they might not.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18 You could find yourself misinterpreting what's really going on in a relationship.

You're thinking everything is fine with your honey, but really he or she could be planning an escape.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 You are taking everything way too personally. If your boyfriend frowned at you, that doesn't mean he suddenly thinks you're fat. If your girlfriend was crying, that doesn't mean you said something that hurt her feelings.

Aries March 21-April 19 You are feeling super sexual. One partner just isn't enough for you. If you're in a serious relationship, you could be thinking about getting serious with somebody else, too. Be warned: This is likely to get you in trouble.

Taurus April 20-May 20 You're hitting a comfortable groove with your love life. If you're single, you're flirting with some cool new people. If you're with somebody, you're enjoying spending time with a fabulous honeybunch. Or your honey smoothy. Or some other disgustingly cute nickname.

Gemini May 21-June 21 A bouncy moon is inspiring your imagination. You're fantasizing about a sexy former flame or a new cutie you met. Or you're cooking up an obsession for somebody who is hopelessly out of reach, like a happily married friend.

What will 'Glee' do? The death of Cory Monteith is going to hit "Glee" hard. The series will address the absence of Monteith's character, Finn, in the season's third episode, executive producer Ryan. Murphy told thr.com. After that, the series will go on hiatus as creators figure out how to go forward with the show.

"It was a oneknee thing! It was serious, it was very old school."
